THE SOUTH-CAROLINA AND COUNTRY GAZETTE; JOURNAL.

Containing the freſheſt Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1771.

TO BE SOLD, OR EXCHANGED FOR NEGROES,

A Tract of TIDE SWAMP, on the iſland of Argyle, ſeven miles above the town of Savannah, containing, as imagined, near ſeven hundred acres; near two hundred and fifty, cleared and compleatly banked in, with buildings of every kind ſuitable for a plantation, equal at leaſt to any in the province; a machine that beats ſix large barrels of rice per day, may be bought with the place, if agreeable to the purchaſer, with near twenty head of milch cattle. The ſituation of this plantation admits of receiving the tide from two rivers at once, ſo that there is no doubt of watering your field every fortnight if required. The value of this ſettlement is well known to numbers, and needs no other recommendation, than referring thoſe who incline to buy, to view it. No inducement would have been ſufficient for the owner's parting with it, but its being on an iſland, will not admit of his turning his ſtock to that advantage which he can do on other lands that he owns elſewhere.

WILLIAM WILLIAMSON.

N. B. If the purchaſer finds it inconvenient to pay the money, he may have a long credit, paying the intereſt annually, and giving proper ſecurity.

Charles-Town, December 21, 1770.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 12.

THE ball at Guildhall on Friday night, was opened about nine o'clock, by the Marquis of Rockingham and the late Lady Mayoreſs; the dancing continued till about two, when a great number of young fellows, heated by liquor, got upon the huſtings, and becauſe they were not ſupplied with what wine they demanded, broke all the glaſſes, bottles, &c. within their reach; at length they fell to fighting, when an attorney in the Temple was beaten in an inhuman manner; a man who had picked up a ſword dropped in the fray, going to give it to the owner, was ſet upon by two others who demanded it, and beat moſt unmercifully, and it is thought they would have killed him, had not Mr. Pyle, belonging to the Lord Mayor, interpoſed, who received a wound in the left hand, by the point of a ſword; notwithſtanding which he ſecured one of them, and obliged him to give in his name and place of abode. This ſcene of noiſe and confuſion laſted till half paſt ſix o'clock, when the rioters finding they could get no more wine, and having done all the miſchief they could, left the hall.

We have the pleaſure to aſſure the public, that the paragraph which mentioned the Engliſh veſſel on board of which Dr. Solander, of the Britiſh muſeum, and other ingenious gentlemen, embarked for the Philippine iſlands, having been ſunk by the Spaniards, is totally void of foundation.

NOVEMBER 13. We hear that Lord Chatham has prepared an extraordinary ſpeech, containing a full ſtate of our preſent grievances, which it is ſaid, will raiſe the admiration of all Europe.

This morning died at his houſe, in Bolton-ſtreet, the right honourable George Grenville.

Extract of a letter from Captain Weſtcombe, of the Richmond, from Gijon, dated off Dover, November 11.

"I failed from Gijon the 3d inſtant; on the 22d of October entered the Port of Corunna, twenty ſhips of the line, and twenty tranſports, all French; and the Spaniards have at their port twenty ſail more of the line, all ready for ſea; I came away by night, expecting to be ſtopped if I remained till the next day."

A letter received yeſterday from Portſmouth mentions, that the diſtemper on board the Dutch ſhip at that place, is no more than what we call the goal diſtemper, having ſeveral felons on board, which they were carrying to the Eaſt-Indies.

NOVEMBER 14. There was the greateſt court at Carlton-houſe yeſterday that has been known for ſome years.

Lord Mansfield ſat yeſterday in the houſe of Lords as ſpeaker.

There was near 200 members at the Cockpit on Monday night, expected [illegible]

Yeſterday the Earl of Chatham arrived in town from Hayes, but neither he nor Lord Temp[illegible]

Lord Camden attended the houſe of peers yeſterday, but did not ſpeak in the debate.

It was on Monday night aſſerted at the Smyrna, that two noble earls had deſerted the minority.

It is imagined that Mr. De Grey will not have the ſeals till the latter end of the week.

At a council held laſt week, the ſeals were certainly offered to Lord Mansfield, who refuſed them, and urged very ſtrong reaſons for his non acceptance.

A bill is intended to be brought in to take away the charter from the province of Maſſachuſetts-Bay.

NOVEMBER 15. Yeſterday there was a more numerous levee at St. James's than has been known for many years.

Yeſterday the houſe of peers, preceded by Lord Mansfield, their ſpeaker, waited on his Majeſty at St. James's, with their addreſs of thanks for his moſt gracious ſpeech from the throne, the purport of which is, that his Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal ſubjects, the lords ſpiritual and temporal, in parliament aſſembled, return his Majeſty their humble thanks for his Majeſty's moſt gracious ſpeech from the throne. That they beg leave to offer his Majeſty their very ſincere congratulations on the ſafe and happy delivery of the Queen, and the birth of a princeſs; and to aſſure his Majeſty of their unfeigned joy at the increaſe of his domeſtic happineſs, and that they conſider every addition to his illuſtrious houſe, from which theſe kingdoms have received the moſt important benefits, as a further ſecurity to their religious and civil liberties. That they are too ſenſible of the bleſſings of peace not to feel the greateſt concern at any event which threatens to interrupt its continuance, and defeat his Majeſty's wiſe and gracious purpoſe to maintain it. But, grateful as they are for this proof of his Majeſty's paternal regard to the repoſe and happineſs of his people, they owe his Majeſty no leſs thanks for his anxious vigilance over the honour of his crown, and the intereſts of his people. That they return his Majeſty their moſt thankful acknowledgments, as well for the immediate demand, which his Majeſty has been pleaſed to make from the court of Spain, of ſatisfaction for injury received, as for the inſtant preparations that his Majeſty made to do himſelf juſtice, in caſe his requiſition ſhould fail of procuring it. And they are exceedingly happy to be aſſured, that his Majeſty will think it expedient to continue prepared to aſſert the honour of his crown, and the ſecurity of the rights of his people, upon an event ſo deeply affecting both, until the injury ſhall be properly repaired, and ſatisfactory proof be given of the ſincere reſolution of other powers to preſerve the general tranquility of Europe. They, on their part, beg leave to aſſure his Majeſty, that they will not fail to make the utmoſt efforts in their power to maintain objects ſo juſtly dear to them, as the dignity of his Majeſty's crown, and the ſecurity of the national rights. That they are very happy to be informed, that the people in moſt of his Majeſty's colonies in North-America, are departing from thoſe combinations which were calculated to diſtreſs the commerce of this country, and they hope ſoon to ſee an end of thoſe unwarrantable practices which have ſo long oppreſſed his Majeſty's ſubjects in one of thoſe provinces. That they are highly ſenſible of his Majeſty's goodneſs and care, in taking ſuch precautions to ſecure this kingdom againſt the viſitation of that fatal calamity, which has of late appeared in ſome of the diſtant parts of Europe; and they ſhall always be ready to concur in any meaſures that ſhall be found neceſſary to the ſupport of his Majeſty's endeavours for ſo ſalutary a purpoſe. That they have the moſt grateful ſenſe of his Majeſty's favourable opinion of their conſtant endeavours to promote the true intereſt of this country: That they will, in all their deliberations upon points of a domeſtic nature, exert themſelves for the extenſion of our commerce, the improvement of the revenue, and the maintenance of order and government: And they flatter themselves, that his Majesty will not be disappointed in the gracious expectation he has formed of their zeal, in the support of his Majesty's crown, and the reputation and prosperity of his kingdoms." To which his Majesty was pleased to make the following most gracious answer:

"My Lords, IT gives me great satisfaction to find that you entertain so just a sense of the importance of peace, while that desirable object can be maintained consistently with the honour of my crown and the rights of my people: You may depend upon my best endeavours to preserve that inestimable blessing, so long as it is compatible with objects still more essential to the happiness and prosperity of my kingdoms. The affectionate part you take in the happy delivery of the queen, and the increase of my family, gives me much pleasure."

Tuesday, in a certain great assembly, an amendment was proposed to the address, by the duke of Richmond, by leaving out the word instant before the word preparations.

It is expected that orders will soon be issued to the constable of the Tower, and to Mr. Akerman, keeper of Newgate, to prepare several apartments for the reception of some people of consequence.

It is somewhat extraordinary in these times, that there was no division on the address on Tuesday night.

A certain oration is allowed in general to be the most manly of any that has been delivered from the throne during the present reign.

The ministry, we can assure the public, are now absolutely determined to demand satisfaction of the court of Spain with the sword, and not with the pen.

The Rockingham interest, we hear, preponderates now in the opposition, in consequence of the death of some late distinguished characters.

There are confirmed accounts received of the indefatigable industry of the French, in putting, at this time, all their forts and fortifications in repair, some of which even were absolutely stipulated against in the last treaty of peace.

Letters from Paris assure, that a treaty of alliance is signed between the house of Bourbon, the Emperor, the King of Prussia, and the Republic of Venice.

Letters from Madrid say, that just at the departure of the post an order from the King arrived there to march a battalion of the Spanish guards, and another of the Walloon guards, towards the port of Santa Maria.

The following ships of war are in commission at Spithead, Portsmouth harbour, and St. Helens: Namur, Griffiths, 90 guns; Ajax, Allen, 74; Arrogant, Moore, 74; Centaur, Bentinck, 74; Bellona, Vernon, 74; Yarmouth, Varlo, 74; Temeraire, Le Cras, 74; Belleisle, Ourry, 74; Cornwall, Lloyd, 74; Elizabeth, Hale, 74; St. Antonio, Affleck, 64; Achilles, Wheelock, 64; Lippon, Brereton, 60; Phœnix, Saxton, 40; Liverpool, Braithwaite, 32; Venus, Balfour, 36; Pallas, Lafotey, 36; Diana, Onslow, 32; Juno, Scott, 32; Glory, Ruthven, 28; Lizard, Inglis, 28; Emerald, Moutrie, 32; Otter, Williams, 14; Merlin, Marshal, 18; Favourite, Maltby, 28; Huffar, Linzee, 28; Weazel, Young, 14 guns.

The right honourable the house of peers are adjourned to Monday. Yesterday both houses of convocation met, and further adjourned to the 17th of January.

The captains of several ships at Barcelona write to their owners in London, that they are in great danger of being seized by the Spaniards, as they hourly expect war to be declared against England; and therefore intreat them to insure both ships and cargoes immediately; that they will take the first opportunity of sailing from thence for Gibraltar, where they hope to arrive before the declaration of war; and that they intend to wait there till they can have a convoy for England. These letters are dated the first instant.

NOVEMBER 16. Mr. Dowdeswell pledged his honour in a certain society on Tuesday last, that he would at least once in every session, during the [illegible] return to the people of [illegible] determination upon the Middlesex election.

It was confirmed by the premier, that four ships of the line had been dispatched to retake Falkland's-islands; two of them are the Dorsetshire and Edgar, which sailed from Portsmouth on the 30th of October. The Dorsetshire, Captain Clements, is destined for foreign service for five years.

It is said, that on the arrival of the messenger from Madrid, all the papers relative to the Spanish dispute (including the Last message) will be laid before an august assembly.

Lord North, in answer to a hint that had been thrown out, that it was absurd to employ one branch of the house of Bourbon to mediate our differences with the other, assured a certain assembly on Tuesday last, "that England wanted no mediator; that she was able to settle her own disputes, and resent any injuries offered to her; and that he was certain the gentleman who entertained that opinion, must have collected his information either from news-papers, or coffee-house politicians."

It is asserted, there is a junction of the Toulon and Corunna fleets, consisting of twenty-four sail of the line.

The following ships of war are getting ready at Plymouth for sea as fast as possible, viz. Fame, 74; Trident, 63; Ocean, 90; and Boyne, 64 guns.

At a court of common council holden yesterday it was moved, that the sum of forty shillings for every able seaman, and twenty shillings for every ordinary seaman, over and above the bounty granted by his Majesty, be given during the pleasure of this court, and not exceeding one month from this day, to every such seaman as shall enter at the Guildhall of this city into the service of his Majesty, and carried in the affirmative. A motion was made, that an humble address, remonstrance, and petition, be presented to his Majesty by this court, touching the violated right of election, and praying a dissolution of the present parliament, which was declared to be carried in the affirmative. A division being demanded, there appeared seven aldermen and seventy-three commoners, for the question, and eight aldermen and forty commoners against it. A committee was then appointed, consisting of six aldermen and twelve commoners, to prepare the said address, remonstrance, and petition, who were ordered to withdraw immediately for that purpose, and returning therewith, it was read and approved, ordered to be fairly transcribed, and signed by the town clerk, and presented to his Majesty by the whole court; and that the sheriffs, attended by the remembrancer, do wait on the King to know his royal will and pleasure when he will be pleased to receive the same.

A Dutch man of war from Cadiz, arrived at Portsmouth, has brought home two hundred thousand dollars for the use of the merchants.

Mr. Burke is expected this evening to make a motion in a great assembly, on an affair of the utmost importance, and it is thought the debates will run high.

A correspondent informs us, that Mr. De Grey is appointed lord keeper, but that he is not yet sworn into his office, nor is the day for performing that ceremony yet fixed on. And by the same hand we are told, that Mr. Wedderburn will succeed Mr. De Grey as attorney-general; and it is asserted confidently, that a great lawyer will resign all his law appointments. A little time will, doubtless, determine the truth or falsity of the above reports.

MADRID, October 15. Our court having resolved to reinforce the garrisons in America, has just given orders for eleven battalions to be embarked immediately for Carthagena, Porto-Rico, the Havana, Caracca, and Campeachy.

LISBON, October 3. We have the following account by the last letters from Alexandria in Egypt. Eli Bey, now Sultan of Egypt, intended to make himself master of Gaza, a seaport of Palestine, but as it was known, the bashaw of Sida, with some other Turkish officers, went with the utmost expedition to the assistance of that town. The same letters mention, that the Bey has made the Venetian ambassador a present of a very fine horse, and has issued an order, permitting the Europeans to travel throughout his dominions on horseback, they not having been permitted to ride on any thing but asses these twenty-eight years past.

As FALKLAND'S-ISLANDS seems at present to engross the attention of the public, a small description of it no doubt will be agreeable to the generality of our readers, as the driving the English from thence seems to be productive of a rupture between Great-Britain and Spain.

From Guthrie's New Geographical, Historical and Commercial Grammar.

LEAVING the Bahama and West-India islands, we shall now proceed along the south-east coast of America, as far as the 52d degree of south lat. where the reader, by looking into the map, will perceive the Falkland's-islands, situated near the Streights of Magellan, at the utmost extremity of South-America. It has been generally believed, that the richest gold mines in Chili are carefully concealed by the Indians, as well knowing that the discovery of them would only excite in the Spaniards a greater thirst for conquest and tyranny, and would render their own independence more precarious. King Charles II. of England, considered the discovery of this coast of such consequence, that Sir John Narborough was purposely fitted out to survey the Streights of Magellan, the neighbouring coast of Patagonia, and the Spanish ports in that frontier; with directions, if possible, to procure some intercourse with the Chilian Indians, who are generally at war, or at least on ill terms with the Spaniards; and to establish a commerce and a lasting correspondence with them. Though Sir John, through accidental causes, failed in this attempt, which, in appearance, promised so many advantages to this nation, his transactions upon that coast, besides the many valuable improvements he furnished to geography and navigation, are rather an encouragement for further trials of this kind, than any objection against them. It appeared by the precautions and fears of the Spaniards, that they were fully convinced of the practicability of the scheme he was sent to execute, and extremely alarmed with the apprehention of its consequences. It is said that his Majesty King Charles II. was so far prepossessed with the belief of the emoluments which might redound to the public from this expedition, and was so eager to be informed of the event of it, that, having intelligence of Sir John Narborough's passing through the Downs, on his return, he had not patience to attend his arrival at court, but went himself in his barge to Gravesend to meet him.

"As therefore it appears (says the author of Anson's Voyage) that all our future expeditions to the South Seas must run a considerable risk of proving abortive, whilst in our passage thither we are under the necessity of touching at the Portuguese settlement of Brazil, (for they may certainly depend on having their strength, conditions and designs betrayed to the Spaniards) the discovery of some place more to the southward, where ships might refresh, and supply themselves with the necessary sea-stock for their voyage round Cape Horn, would be an expedient that would relieve us from these embarrasments, and would surely be a matter worthy the attention of the public. Nor does this seem difficult to be effected; for we have already the imperfect knowledge of two places, which might, perhaps, on examination, prove extremely convenient for this purpose; one of them is Pepy's Island, in the latitude of forty-seven south, and laid down by Dr. Halley about eighty leagues to the eastward of Cape Blanco, on the coast of Patagonia; the other is Falkland's Isles, in the latitude of fifty-one and a half, lying nearly south of Pepy's Island. The last of these have been seen by many ships, both French and English. Woodes Rogers, who run along the north-east coast of these isles in the year 1708, tells us that they extended about two degrees in length, and appeared with gentle descents from hill to hill, and seemed to be good ground, interspersed with woods, and not destitute of harbours. Either of these places, as they are islands at a considerable distance from the continent, may be supposed, from their latitude, to lie in a climate sufficiently temperate. This even in time of peace, might be of great consequence to this nation; and in time of war, would make us masters of those seas."

It would appear, from the secret expeditions lately made to the South Seas, that, besides this new settlement on Falkland's islands, since that gentleman wrote, the government have another in view, round Cape Horn, which indeed is equally necessary for a place of general rendezvous, to refit and refresh after effecting that dreadful navigation; and where, when accomplished, our ships, in time of war, approach a hostile coast, the only good ports in these seas being possessed by the Spaniards.

By our having the possession of one good harbour here, and keeping the royal navy on a respectable footing, we shall have nothing to fear from all the united force of France, Spain, and Portugal. Whoever turns his eye to the map of America, and observes the number of our settlements, and their situation in respect to the possession of those powers in this quarter, will see the impossibility of their trade escaping the vigilance of our cruisers, pouring out from every corner of this immense country. Add to this, that having hitherto attempted their colonies with success, what may we not expect in a future war, from such additional strength, so many convenient harbours to refit, or to supply our fleets and armies.

AN ESSAY ON PATIENCE.

THE man of a frantic heated imagination considers patience as flowing from a meanness of soul, a dastardly disposition, the last resource of cowards; but the man of real sagacity, who can view things through a dispassionate medium, discovers in it all the genuine marks of a noble mind. It is supported by hope, and is entirely unacquainted with every species of despair, the constant companion of a lowness of sentiment. Patience is so strong a barrier against every kind of disgrace, that all our ills lose the greatest part of their power, by opposing this virtue to them. It combats all opponents, and every conflict is a victory. It honourably resists the greatest hardships of this world, and sweetens the bitters of adversity in such a manner, that we scarce perceive we are miserable. It is one of those virtues that constantly carries its own reward, for the very practice of it makes us sensible of its benefits. The Emperor Marcus Aurelius, so famed for his fortitude and patience, often said that Cæsar acquired the empire by the sword, Augustus by inheritance, Caligula by the merits of his father, Nero by tyranny, Titus by having vanquished Judea; but that for his part, though of a low extraction, he had obtained it by patience.

Again, whatever crosses and misfortunes we meet with, and however heavy their burthen, they cannot overwhelm us, whilst we are not abandoned by patience: on the contrary, they become proportionably lightened as we resolutely exercise this virtue. As every thing in nature has its contrast, so patience is the opposite to despair; wherefore the Christians consider it as an heavenly grace, and the philosophers of antiquity pronounced it the last efforts of a firm and generous soul. It is very nearly allied to courage, which cannot shine without opponents; in the like manner this virtue disappears as soon as misfortunes desert us. Patience is the most generous of all friends, never appearing in prosperity; but when our miseries attain a pitch that threatens all our future happiness, she never fails to offer her assistance to those really inclined to avail themselves of her kindness.

In fine, if, as the English poet says,

The only wretched are the Wise, they alone can judiciously avail themselves of the proper antidote --Patience is their birthright, an inheritance precluded from fools, who are never the architects of their own good fortune, but frequently of their own misery.
